

How Do You Compare To The Average American? Surprised At This.

CNBC recently ran a survey they call the “All America Survey” in which they go out and survey Americans across all income levels and backgrounds. They try to get a pulse on what the average American thinks about the markets, investing and other financial topics.

I found it quite insightful to see what the “average American” is thinking right now. How good an investment environment are we in? What are the best investments available today? How do stocks compare to bonds or real estate to gold.

You have to compare yourself to this crowd for one great reason: it will tell you a lot about your investment savvy. And let me tell you, the “average American”, at least according to this survey, is not terribly savvy.

Today’s podcast dives right in and talks about these results and how you might compare. I hope you enjoy.